Dr. Ross was able to explain a very difficult subject into something that was a little manageable.

His hand-outs were extremely helpful since the texts were confusing most of the time.

I suggest two items:

① Continue providing hand-outs throughout the semester

② Have office hours spread-out during the week rather all on one day.

(Monday's were a bit hard for me)

Prof. Ross displayed an excellent command of the subject matter. He also took the time to explain difficult subject matter. The problem I had was finding time to get help. Sometimes it was hard finding him or making his office hours. But when I did make an appointment, he was more than willing to help.

The class was very interesting and challenging.
At times it was a bit heavy on the proofs of theorems.
Some more sample problems may help to explain the uses of theorems better than going thru the proofs.
Homeworks were good. Gave information and applications.
Lectures followed a consistent train of thought.
